The experimental research points to the fact that before physical or cognitive space can evolve from phylogenetic, ontogenetic and diachronic investigations must be undertaken in order to determine the order in which changes occur. The nature and function of kinesthetic space must be studied and defined before the possibility of such a space can be studied. Theoretical and conceptual considerations are discussed; the problems of studying the intrapsychic development of such spaces are considered from an epistemological viewpoint.Management of the Patient with Acute Pain in the Trauma Patient.
