The tires have to be at least half full of air, but should never be below 25psi. Also, your brakes should be properly adjusted and functioning properly, to assure maximum performance. Another aspect of bicycle maintenance that is important is lubricating your chain to keep it smooth and prevent the chain from becoming rusty. The chain needs to be lubricated daily and you can use either automotive oil or a chain oil. Store your bikes as they will last longer if you keep them clean and clean your bikes often. Store your bikes as they will last longer if you keep them clean and clean your bikes often. As with most products, the greater number of miles on your bike, the more you should expect to get out of it. You could invest in a higher quality bike but it wouldn't be much of a saving if you rode it for 50 miles a day because you've broken a derailleur or chain and you could simply replace it for about the same amount of money. Plan your daily rides and develop a rotation. As with most products, the greater number of miles on your bike, the more you should expect to get out of it.
