In this study, three crystal forms of human 17 beta-HSD type 2 (17 beta-HSD2) were obtained: unliganded, divalent cation-liganded and Zn(2+) salt. In the unliganded structure, the overall enzyme conformation and active site were not well defined due to the formation of an aggregated particle. Upon addition of Ni(2+) or Zn(2+) to the unliganded crystal, both crystal forms exhibited active 17 beta-HSD2 in monomeric conformations. The crystallographic analyses of all three crystal forms indicated that 17 beta-HSD2-Ni(2+) and 17 beta-HSD2-Zn(2+) structures were in monomeric forms, whereas 17 beta-HSD2-Ni(2+) was in a monomer-dimeric form. However, the zinc binding site could not be resolved in 17 beta-HSD2-Zn(2+) due to non-crystallographic symmetry (NCS) restraints. In 17 beta-HSD2-Ni(2+) and 17 beta-HSD2-Zn(2+) crystals, the histidine-274 residue, a ligand for nickel and zinc ions, was shown to be surrounded by four symmetry-related molecules, a dimeric dimer, a non-crystallographic dimer and a monomer. It was proposed that the dimeric form of 17 beta-HSD2-Ni(2+) was likely to be the biological form. The ligand-binding domains were elucidated by comparison of the unliganded, Ni(2+)- and Zn(2+
