While this problem mostly occurs on computers running the Windows 7 operating system, Windows 8 and 10 are not at all immune to it. Main culprit: How to fix the "blue screen of death" when accessing a file. The Windows operating system has a so-called . It is in this case that you need to restart the computer, and you need to do this using the power button. If this does not help, you should open the notification panel (it is located in the lower right corner of the screen), select the "System" section and find the "Status" section there. There should be a "Restart" button, clicking on which will help fix the problem. fffad4f19a
