AutoFormat is a powerful batch program that converts text files to the format used by Windows version of Microsoft Word and Excel. The program is called AutoFormat because it can convert between multiple text and HTML files (almost). There are four buttons on the top right of the program. The first two buttons let you easily choose the text format you want to convert to. The second button automatically chooses the right conversion for you, based on the extension of the file. For instance, if you have a.txt file and you click the second button, it will automatically detect if the file is in HTML, RTF or Plain Text. If you click the first button, you can choose to convert to different formats, such as MS Word, PDF, RTF and Plain Text. The last two buttons let you easily set the options for the conversion. The first one lets you select different tabs and font sizes, as well as the number of lines and paragraphs per page. The second one lets you select the formatting for headings. This includes: fonts, font size, alignment, and indentation. The program also includes two buttons that let you easily adjust the text and background colors for the converted files. The program also lets you convert files that are scattered across folders and subfolders. AutoFormat can be used to convert between most common formats, including RTF, HTML, PDF, Word and Plain Text. With NeoOffice, you can create, edit, view, create presentations, create tables and insert charts from your desktop or from virtually any device. NeoOffice supports most Microsoft Office file formats, as well as OpenOffice.org. NeoOffice, also known as NeoOffice Lite, has a solid feature set, and a clean interface, and it is one of the better open source office suites. Printing from Microsoft Office documents using NeoOffice Documents in Microsoft Word, Excel, and PowerPoint may be printed using the NeoOffice Print option, located on the File menu. NeoOffice lets you select the print mode you want to use, whether you are printing to the printer connected to your computer or a file that you are sending to the printer. NeoOffice can convert most Microsoft Office files to the OpenOffice.org format. You can also create, edit, view, create presentations, and create tables and charts using the NeoOffice tools. Download Free NeoOffice Emil Theodor's Notebook is a simple and elegant application, created to be used as a personal note-
