I use the SSL1_TCP load setting, and this configuration will allow me to download the files using connect.curl as the client. Step 3: Connecting the server you want to load the files Now that we have our script running, we can see it using the second command that reads the files: And before we start playing with things, the server should have the following content: / Process.cgi?application=videojs&process=videobook&locale=ru/en & lang=en (The file should come to us in a file in Russian in addition to the dialog). After prompting the user "The server has this file available" in the same window, you can click on the next item, and the file will be downloaded. url of the downloaded file will show up on your screen. It may be signed with your username or password. If you click on "Load the file", you will see the files in the response: If the file is not empty, it will be renamed to something you want, and there will be a new file attache
