By utilizing a solar-blind metal nanosphere composite (SBMNC) as a plasmonic nanostructure, a highly tunable frequency response of plasmonic solar cells (PSCs) was achieved. The proposed plasmonic solar cell structure was based on a periodic array of the SBMNCs, which could be easily fabricated in a microscale using a two-step soft-molding method. The fabricated SBMNC-based PSC exhibited an open-circuit voltage of 0.90 V, short-circuit current of 9.97 μA, fill factor of 49.2%, and power conversion efficiency of 3.87%, with a remarkable frequency response due to the localized surface plasmon resonance (LSPR) of the SBMNC. Also, the light absorption enhancement factor could be modified with the LSPR of the SBMNC, and thus a large number of excitons could be generated from the direct bandgap semiconductor, ZnO, using the first
