Category:AlcatelQ: What happened to Canonical's packager? I am a bit confused what is the status of canonical's Ubuntu developer. This is not a question but a question about me. I am on holidays and long time ago I used to work with Ubuntu and I talked to Canonical and they told me that James Troup the man who I met at Dreamforce last year and who I spoke to for the first time actually in 2010, is the main "dev" of Ubuntu. I was told that he works with the community, that he brings important people together and that he helped Canonical to get hired by Facebook. I did not talk to him directly again after this and when I was working with Canonical, Canonical sent me to James (about 2 years ago), but after that I never saw him or he didn't answer me. Now I run across questions and answers and bugs reported and solved by a person named "Ubuntu Packager" and I am really confused. I would appreciate if someone could let me know what happened to him. A: James Troup has been a Ubuntu developer for over 5 years and still is. He is also one of the original developers and started development on GNOME for Linux. He co-founded Canonical's Ubuntu One service, and brought Canonical's employees to the Dreamforce Technology Conference. You have the wrong person, James was not at Dreamforce, nor is he an Ubuntu Packager. Q: How do I make a custom file viewer/editor with script support? I'd like to have a file/folder manager with a scripting interface. I'd like to be able to make an action

(that would interpret python or lua or something, etc) which then changes the state of the application to one where I can view, edit, and delete files in a custom way (possibly with a custom GUI). In addition to this, I'd like to be able to parse files. With normal programs, I have no problem checking the properties for .doc, .xml, .jpg, etc. However, I want the user to be able to drag and drop file extensions into the system and have it see them in an editable text box, so I need a way to parse those file extensions. Thanks! A: First,
