While Battlefield games are known for their persistent multiplayer experiences, Medal of Honor is known for. Phillips 66 just announced that it's the largest single investor in the Wilmington Trust Company's new $500 million stock market safety deposit box facility being built in Wilmington, Delaware. The company invested $400 million in the project. "This will provide the estimated 250,000 banking customers in the Wilmington area with a safe and secure alternative for storing their valuables while creating an additional market for the bank's shareholders," Drexel Heritage Executive Vice President Bob Munroe said. The new facility is about 160,000 square feet and will be equipped with multiple levels of security including "positive restraint systems," metal walls and doors and inspection stations to ensure safety. The facility is about five times the size of a typical bank safety deposit box. The community will be served by three publicly traded companies: Wilmington Trust, Citadel Securities and Union National Bank. In addition, Citigroup, GE Capital, Fidelity Investments and the children of John P. and Christina E. Reynolds also are investors. "The Reynolds families are a combination of successful private investors and community leaders
