Understanding the basic techniques, principles of general design and installation and / or construction of utilities necessary for a building or structure, etc. To perform installation work, special tools, fixtures, building materials, as well as machines and equipment can be used to perform work with maximum efficiency in a given time frame and at minimal cost. At the same time, there are several main types of work that require specialized knowledge: The foundation of the building is laid, and then it is laid, taking into account all the preparatory measures. There is a huge range of equipment for plumbing, and the pipeline, which is located directly underground, deserves special attention. For laying a drainage system, it is very important to use only high-quality and reliable equipment that will last a long time and without breakdowns. Installation of the sewerage system is carried out using modern and reliable materials. To make the installation of a heating or water supply system, it is required to complete the development of the project and the specification of the equipment. This will allow you to calculate the exact cost of all work and comply with all rules and regulations. There are also separate types of work on the installation of systems: Installation of an air conditioner, the external unit of which is installed directly on the wall of the building or directly on the roof.
