Send Anywhere is an accessible and appealing piece of software aimed to help you share and transfer files or even folders with friends or workmates, by means of peer to peer connections, which does not rely on server data storage. Novice-friendly usage The program is quite intuitive and simple-looking, making it easy to handle even if your experience in working with such tools is lacking. It requires no account or login information, thus ensuring your anonymity. The only thing you need to worry about is the six digit code generated for each file you dispatch, as it will help the recipient obtain the data directly from you. Transfer files securely and anonymously between devices Send Anywhere is quite easy to work with, requiring you to just load the file or the directory that you wish to transfer, by browsing through your PC and opening it in the application. At the same time, drag and drop actions are supported, to simplify the task. The utility comes with two main functions: 'Send' or 'Save 24hr', allowing you to choose whichever matches your current needs. The 'Send' option will generate a unique 6-digit key (or you can opt for a OR code), which you can copy and share with the recipient, so they can gain access to the item in time, as it is only valid for ten minutes. Using the 'Save 24hr' function, the file is available for longer than the default duration and can be accessed either through a short link or a key, then downloaded. In terms of configuration options, Send Anywhere lets you define the save path for received files, or you can make your desktop discoverable and choose which folders to share. A handy P2P file sharing instrument All things considered, Send Anywhere proves to be a useful and efficient tool that you can rely on for transferring files in a secure manner, ensuring your data does not fall into the wrong hands, nor can it be traced back to a specific user or account.
