tmpgenc authoring works 5.2.2.61 keygen tmpgenc authoring works 5.2.2.61 keygen tmpgenc authoring works 5.2.2.61 keygenVisitors to the home built by Marcel Wanders for a family friend in the Dutch countryside were in for a surprise when they were confronted by a giant snake and chimpanzee at the entrance to the place. The cuckoo-spotted python slithered its way past the house while a chimp stood guard in the garden. Mr Wanders, famed for his animal home renovations, has lived in the property since 2008 and took advantage of the DIY skills of his neighbours who built the unusual living space for the architect after he was set to sell the property. Advert Mr Wanders said: "I have been living in the house for three years now, and I guess visitors never see the details." Marcel told The Daily Telegraph he had shared it with his neighbours to see if they could build an unusual extension, which he has since worked on himself. Marcel said: "In the end, they were hired to do it. The chimps are of course part of the landscape now. They are in a hiding place in a part of the garden. On some days, he chases a butterfly in the garden." He added: "During the year, I take care of it every time. I feed him every day, give him some bananas, change his place and protect him. At night, I lock him in the cellar." Advert Credit: Facebook Although Marcel's wife Bea is an animal lover, she claims the snake has been a nightmare. Bea said: "He doesn't pay much attention to us, but we can't complain. He's an incredible animal, but he has a lot of energy and we have to watch out." Advert Marcel said: "When I see him, he gives me his head. He's a one-man army." The chimps house has seen Marcel's neighbours come and go, but it's taken a while for the python to become a permanent fixture. He added: "I want to move, but I like it here. We have so much space that we can do anything." Advert This isn't the first time Marcel Wanders has gained the 82138339de
