In this case, there is little question that the juveniles were represented by counsel in response to the delinquency petitions; rather, the question is whether those lawyers were present at the adjudicatory hearing. The juvenile court order does not specify whether a separate hearing actually took place or whether M.C. and C.S. simply appeared in court with their respective attorneys. It is true that not all counsel need appear in court for the adjudicatory hearing to take place. See TEX. FAM. CODE ANN. § 51.095. But it is also true that no petition was brought until the adjudicatory hearing. See id. § 51.04(d), (e). Had the State or the attorney appointed on behalf of a juvenile objected at the moment the pleas were made, an inference of a separate hearing would be warranted. In this case, however, the juvenile court must determine, 12 upon remand, whether the attorney was properly appointed and whether the juveniles' pleas were voluntarily and intelligently made. 3da54e8ca3
