What's New In Abexo Free Registry Cleaner?

Remove invalid registry items...The Australian Greens are gunning for the Senate this election, demanding a royal commission into the defence industry, cracking down on coal mines and introducing a carbon tax. Greens leader Richard Di Natale said if they took the Senate, he would further their goal of finally getting a national plan in place to address global warming. "If I have to, I will do it," he said. "I will get a royal commission into this so that we understand the true risks that we're facing, and then make sure that we protect the family for the future." Mr Di Natale said Australia was the world's largest coal exporter and, when the carbon tax comes into effect in July next year, it will not be the country that leads the world in cutting carbon emissions. "I hope that the Government, that the Government will take a leadership role and lead the world to clean energy, not run away from the truth that we face serious and dangerous risks." Mr Di Natale said the seat was crucial, and had been "a bit of an afterthought" for the Coalition. "We can't have another seat like what we had in Western Australia, where this seat, the balance of power is swinging between the Greens and Labor," he said. "We just have to keep people like Tony Abbott in his place."

A win would be just a slight move away from that goal. Mr Di Natale said he would have rung Mr Abbott soon after the election to congratulate him for being returned. "I think I would have said I'm so sorry that he's got those numbers," he said. "But
