Q: How to avoid excessive garbage collection in a threaded C# app I have a method that takes an hour to run, but the method is used in several places in the code. I'd like the method to run on a separate thread, but obviously C# (.net 3.5) doesn't allow direct use of threads that I'm aware of. So... I came up with a very simple solution: I create a second object (that mimics the outer object) and let it do the slow work and "share" the objects with the main program. My naive solution is probably not the best one and I wonder if there are any better, more idiomatic ways to solve this problem in the current.net framework version. My first instinct was to wrap the work in a try-catch block, but the catch (Exception) part would mean that a non critical error would also terminate my work. I looked into Parallel Tasks (new to me), but they seem to be intended for work that might require other threads. I looked into Task.Factory.StartNew(), but it doesn't seem to be built for this purpose, and I'm having a hard time getting my head around it. To recap

Fifa 22 Features Key:

- FIFA 22 introduces “HyperMotion Technology,” which uses motion capture data collected from real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits.
- FIFA 22 delivers authentic, next generation gameplay that’s woven into stadiums and teams across the world. Play through historic stadiums in REAL, whether it’s the newly remodeled Wembley or the Santiago Bernabéu.
- The new ProPremier Matchday engine bring the game to life on the pitch with thousands of new animations and authentic player expression, including new celebrations like the arm aloft action, a new inflatable ‘sangta’ pitch artificial surface which produces an authentic pitch surface, and distinctive positioning and ball physics that react to the unpredictable movement of the players and the ball on the pitch.
- New attacking plays go over, under, around and through opposing defenses as passing patterns are defined to avoid the worst defensive play, and create space in unexpected ways.
- FIFA 22 introduces an improved AI, designed to take inspiration from real-

- world tactics, formations and playstyles. The game now also includes an expansive coach pathway that gives you more ways to grow as a manager.
- Additional features include: New Take Over System - take charge of a match early to change your tactics mid-game. FFT also includes some exciting new additions to Ultimate Team, including: new online features, an exciting gameplay rework and more to come, including the Player eCoach - a host of new cards and embellishments that will unlock abilities and traits once played.
 - FIFA 22 lets you play a more authentic, next generation FIFA experience that delivers more goalmouth action, higher scoring matches, and the most realistic game play EVER in FIFA's favourite modern open world epic!
