Q: Angular2: AngularFire2: no provider for google.firebase.database I try to inject a firebase database into my Angular2 application. import { AngularFireDatabaseModule } from 'angularfire2/database'; export const firebaseDatabase: AngularFireDatabaseModule = AngularFireDatabaseModule; I use AngularFire2 with typescript 2.1.2 I can see the module in "node_modules/angularfire2/database" I can import it in my "declarations" But I always get the following error: How can I fix this problem and be able to use firebase? A: You can't use a module like that: AngularFireDatabaseModule. What you have to do is use a provider. The method to do so is "injectable". You can either just create your own provider: import { FIREBASE_CONFIG } from 'angularfire2/database'; import { Injectable } from '@angular/core'; @Injectable() export class MyFirebaseDatabaseProvider { constructor(private config: FIREBASE_CONFIG) { } getMyDatabase() { return this.config; } } As well as the AngularFireModule.provider in the imports section, which injects an instance of the MyFirebaseDatabaseProvider and allows you to call methods like: export const MyFirebaseDatabase = this.angularFireDatabase.database; This provider can then be used to create components, services and models etc. You can also use the AngularFire2Module, which contains the provider functionality for you if you use TypeScript.
