Photoshop can also be used in many other ways, including viewing images. With the Open dialog closed, click to change to the Browse tab and select a new folder in the File Locations dialog box (see below) to view the images. The main area of the Photoshop window is the Photoshop image editing area. The same area is shown in the following photo. The canvas area is the transparent area at the top. Images are drawn directly onto this area and can be redrawn and resized. Below the canvas is the Layers palette, the place where you manage the various layers. To edit a layer, click on the "layer" section. To remove a layer, click on the red and white "minus" symbol in the layers palette. The following photos demonstrate how to resize images. To resize an image, select the canvas, click the cropping button in the Photoshop window, enter a percentage value in the text box, and click the magic wand icon. The following photo shows you how to edit an image using a paint bucket tool. Select the image, click on the tool in the toolbox area of the Photoshop window, and drag across the canvas to fill it with a color. The following photos show what happens when you change the brush settings. The brush settings are found in the Brush toolbox area of the Photoshop window. To change settings, click on the drop down arrow in the toolbox area and choose the brush settings. Many advanced features can be used to edit digital photos. What's New In?

Tracy's Blog Vanished, and I'm stuck Have you ever felt like you were missing something in your life, something that made you feel fully alive? Or maybe you've just felt like you didn't have the right clothes for the job, or the right vehicle, or you didn't feel comfortable in your skin? As a researcher, trainer and coach, I work in a lot of different environments, and I think about my life and the lives of my clients in similar ways. I have felt these things and have had to ask myself, what am I missing? And then I know I need to get the pieces back together, to find the missing pieces. I'll be speaking at the PA Association of Social Workers' Think Tank this Friday (June 29) on this topic. Stop by to find out more!
