Michael Boyd.Synthesis, structure, and electrochemistry of bis-oxime-tethered tetraamino porphyrin (PAPot). A bis-oxime-tethered tetraamino porphyrin (PAPot) was synthesized and characterized. The structure of (TPyP-Bn₂-NH-ox) was determined by X-ray diffraction, NMR spectroscopy, mass spectrometry, and elemental analysis. Cyclic voltammetric measurements show a reversible one-electron oxidation process at approximately 1.40 V and a one-electron oxidation at approximately 1.38 V. PApot has a lower redox potential than PApT, but the redox potential is shifted to an even more positive potential by a diimine linkage between the porphyrin and the N1 and N2 nitrogens of TPyP. A metal-catalyzed aerobic oxidation of TPyP was shown to result in the formation of the oxime-linked tetraamino porphyrin.
