

the duxtop 9100 mc : this is sometimes marketed as the segura induction burner online, but its actually a less expensive duxtop model, leading to some confusion while ordering one. its design is very similar to the winning duxtop (though less sleek). the interface is also identical. but there are fewer heat settings (15 rather than 20), more nooks and crannies for food to get caught in, and it was the loudest of the models we tested. plus, it didnt do quite as well regulating its temperature during the deep-fry test. in 72 aaron newman and i decided to extract some sections from the synthesizer and see if we could make a new product out of it. first we hooked up an opto-electronic-based envelope-controlled filter; tweaked it and turned it into a little product. digital audio pioneer [and former aes president] barry blesser also participated in its design. we first called it the auto wah and then marketed it as the mu-tron iii. synthesizer inventor bob moogs affidavit helped us get the patent. the mu-tron iii became quite popular thanks in part to stevie wonder; who helped immensely by giving us free publicity and letting us use his name. another model from well-known brand, crock pot. the time select is a lot more high-tech than the sizzle and stew above, but still produced fantastic results. this model features automatic cooking functions for meat, poultry, soup and vegetables. simply select your main ingredient, input the weight and desired finish time, and the time select will automatically adjust the cooking time and temperature of the ingredients to get the best results. for your much-loved tried and tested recipes, theres also a manual setting.

as with all induction cooktops, theres a low whir from internal cooling fans, but the duxtop is relatively quiet. it would be nice if the power automatically adjusted to accommodate the selected temperature setting (we forgot that step the first time we tried to heat oil for frying and it took forever to heat up). while the 20 temperature and power settings are beyond what similar models offer, the increments can be somewhat limiting if youre trying to dial in a specific temperature. finally, we couldnt change the display from fahrenheit to celsius, though that may not be an issue for folks not interested in precision cooking. all of that said, you cant expect too much from a device that doesnt cost too much more than $100. automatic cooking: the time select allows you to set how long it will take to cook your food. the time select is more advanced than the sizzle and stew. selecting a slow setting gives you control over how long the cooktop will be on, while selecting a quick setting gives you control over how quickly the cooktop is on. you can also set the temperature on the time select if you choose to slow down. potion (, pshon) recurring appearance availability obtained buy: all shops find: prima vista, alexandria (x7), evil forest, north gate, ice cavern (x2), dali (x4), bohden gate, burmecia, cleyra's trunk steal and drop: various enemies value 50 gil classification type restorative item specifications abilities heals 150 hp in battle, 100 hp on the field, 300 hp with chemist compatible with auto-potion 5ec8ef588b
